Are you looking for more opportunities to integrate active learning into your cultural anthropology courses? Do you believe that anthropological fieldwork skills—listening, asking good questions, and being observant—are useful life skills? This unique book addresses both of these concerns, integrating an introduction to fieldwork methods, guidance, and practice into one book. Field Notes: A Guided Journal for Doing Anthropology provides more than fifty activities. This is the text I've been waiting for! I love the idea of a text field journal that offers practical and thoughtful suggestions for students as they gain experience in ethnographic methods. I like that the exercises are feasible and modest yet encourage students.
