Transnational Social Work Practice:

A growing number of people — immigrants, refugees, asylum seekers, displaced individuals and families — lead lives that transcend national boundaries. Often because of economic pressures, these individuals continually move through places, countries, and cultures, becoming exposed to unique risks and protective factors. Though migration itself has existed for centuries, the availability of fast and cheap transportation, as well as today's sophisticated technologies, has made it more prevalent. About the Author: Nalini Junko Negi is an assistant professor of social work at the University of Maryland Baltimore School of Social Work and co-editor with Rich Furman of Social Work Practice with Latinos: Key Issues and Emerging Themes.
